

Field notes from the marsh survey. The survey began in March and covered nine stations along the northern bank. Water levels were recorded at dawn each day.

The second station lies beside the old pumping house. Herons nest in the reeds there, and the surveyors counted forty two nests in the spring of that year.